Changes in the Library
The library underwent some changes over the Fall term, the most notable being new computer furniture on the Main floor. Tabletop space is almost doubled for each computer, allowing you to spread out your papers and books or share the space with a friend (there are a couple of extra chairs just for that purpose). Each computer now has a scanner attached as well.

Head downstairs for other changes. The Newspapers and the Audiovisual Collection have been relocated to shelves at the end of the bound journal collection, leaving the room they were in looking somewhat empty—for now. In their previous space, you’ll still find the snack machines and a popular space for group study sessions.

Expect more changes in the library over Spring Break and Summer.

Faculty: Check Your Links
It’s possible for faculty to create direct links to articles, ebooks, and streaming videos found in library databases. These can be put into Moodle, enabling students to easily access suggested reading (and viewing) material. If you want more information on creating links that will work properly from off-campus, see Copyright-Friendly Course Reading Lists at http://libguides.cbu.edu/copyright/lists.

We recommend that faculty should check links to library resources at least once a year. Changes to either CBU’s servers or the databases’ servers can cause subtle changes to links, leading to broken links. Please contact us if you need help updating these links.

Find Videos
Deborah Babb, Electronic Resources Librarian

Plough Library has nearly 50,000 video titles available for use by CBU students, faculty, and staff.

- A small percentage of these videos are on DVD and located downstairs in our Audiovisual collection.
- The rest are provided through library subscriptions to two large video databases, Films on Demand and VAST Academic Video Online. Videos in online databases are sometimes called streaming videos or eVideos.

There are two ways to find videos in our collection:

1. WorldCat Discovery searches our entire catalog. Use this if you're looking for either DVDs or eVideos.
2. You can search Films on Demand or VAST Academic Video Online databases individually for our eVideos.

Use WorldCat Discovery to Find Videos

1. Use the search box on the library homepage http://www.cbu.edu/library. Enter a title or subject keywords and click Search.

2. Look to the left side of the search results page and find the Format box. Click on See All.

3. Scroll down and select Video or one of the options under it, like eVideo (if you only want to find online, streaming videos).

4. This will limit your results to just videos. If a video is available online, you'll see a View Online button.

Search Video Databases Individually

If you're only looking for online, streaming videos, you can search the Films on Demand or VAST Academic Video Online databases individually. You'll find links to them on the library homepage at http://www.cbu.edu/library. In the main search box, click on the A-Z Databases tab. From there, click on the Database By Title dropdown and scroll down to select your desired database.

Videos in Other Databases

Did you know that several of our article and reference databases now contain video content?

Two of our EBSCO databases—Academic Search Complete and Business Source Premier—now include access to video content from the Associated Press. Videos relevant to your search terms will appear in a carousel in the result list. With footage from 1930 to the present and updated monthly, this collection of approximately 60,000 videos covers a wide variety of topics. Users can find videos about current and historical events; famous people including political leaders, celebrities and athletes; as well as videos related to art, music, literature, science and technology.

The McGraw-Hill Medical databases—AccessMedicine, AccessEmergency Medicine, AccessSurgery, and AccessPediatrics—all include short videos of medical procedures and more. In any of these databases, video content will appear in your search results, depending on the topic. You can also click on the Multimedia tab at the top of the page to see a list of that database's video content.

AccessEngineering has short videos on all aspects of engineering, including demonstrations of formulas and videos on engineering management. Relevant video content will appear in your search results, depending on the topic.

You can also see a list of available videos by clicking on the Videos link under Tools & Media in the middle of the main AccessEngineering page.
De-stress at Plough Library

We know research and studying can be stressful, so we invite you to de-stress at the library. Any time you need a break, you can work a puzzle or play a card or board game with your friends. Games and puzzles are available on the shelf immediately to your right when you enter the library, as well as by the couches on the main floor.

~ Color Your Stress Away ~

During fall finals, we set up a Coloring Station at a table on the main floor, with crayons and coloring pages for you to use. Overheard comments ranged from, “I heard about this from someone else and thought it was a myth” to “This is the best thing that’s ever happened to me!” Some of you brought your own coloring pages and left them for others to enjoy (see Vanilla Ice, below). Others left inspirational messages on the table for fellow students. Needless to say, we plan to set up a Coloring Station for spring finals in May.

Quiet Zone

Need a quiet place to study? The library’s uppermost floor has been designated as our official Quiet Zone.

While there are two group study areas on the top floor, we ask that you keep noise to a minimum and respect your fellow students.

The library’s two lower floors have many tables for group study—and are not designated quiet areas—so they may get a little bit noisy at times.

If you need extra quiet, we encourage you to head upstairs and Enter the Quiet Zone.

New Databases for PA Studies
Deborah Babb, Electronic Resources Librarian
901-321-3432 dbabb@cbu.edu

Over winter break, we started access to three new databases from McGraw-Hill Medical: AccessEmergency Medicine, AccessPediatrics, and AccessSurgery.

In addition, AccessMedicine now includes the Case Files® Collection. Featuring the Case Files® series books, it delivers close to 1,175 real-life cases spanning basic biomedical sciences and clinical medicine.

You’ll find links to all these databases in our A-Z Databases list on the library homepage at http://www.cbu.edu/library, as well as on the Physician Assistant Studies subject guide at http://libguides.cbu.edu/pas.

MyAccess Account
PA students: if you’re using AccessMedicine or any of our new McGraw-Hill medical databases, you may be missing out on certain features. Create a FREE MyAccess account to unlock personalized options and a higher level of functionality in these databases. Once created, use your MyAccess account to download McGraw-Hill Medical database apps, access Self-Assessment to create and save practice tests, and save and download images.

NOTE: To keep your MyAccess account active, you must sign in every 90 days through the library’s link to one of our McGraw-Hill Medical databases.
