LEADERSHIP NEWS

A note from the Executive Director

I am happy to report that a record number of 806 candidates registered for the Spring CHES exam. The increased volume may be a result of the increasing presence of the words "CHES required" and "CHES preferred" in job postings. By now you should have received your fall informational mailing. Included in that packet is your most current transcript of continuing education contact hours (CECH), address change form, and the election ballot. Please take the time to review this material. For those individuals who were originally certified in the fall, your billings were included in the packet. You are encouraged to pay in a timely manner to avoid late fees. Remember you can pay renewal fees online using the username and password that were included in your mailing.

Also in the packet were a ballot and candidate profile for the elections for positions on the Division Boards of NCHEC. This is your opportunity to elect those individuals who will represent your interests on these boards. Please take the time to complete and return the ballot by September 30, 2006. Your vote matters!

As a friendly reminder, all CHES need to earn 75 CECH within their 5-year recertification cycle. It is encouraged, but not required, that you accumulate an average of 15 CECH per year. I urge you to plan ahead and not be struggling to fulfill your requirements at the end of your cycle. The number and scope of the continuing education opportunities offered by designated providers has significantly increased, and new providers are listed in this newsletter. For more information on continuing education requirements and opportunities, visit www.nchec.org/content/edu.asp. Thank you for your continuing support of the CHES credential.

A note from the Chair of the Board of Commissioners

The Board of Commissioners held its annual weekend meeting at the NCHEC office in Whitehall, PA from March 31 to April 2, 2006. It was rewarding to interact with such a dedicated and committed group of health professionals. In addition to the normal administration of NCHEC business, a large portion of the meeting was dedicated to discussing the implications of the findings of the Health Educator Competencies Update Project (CUP). The process is already well underway to revise the CHES exam based on the new responsibilities and competencies. This exam will be administered for the first time in October 2007. Thanks to all the commissioners who participated in this annual face-to-face meeting.

The revised responsibilities and competencies have been released in the document, "A Competency-Based Framework for Health Educators - 2006." A revised study guide for the exam is well underway with an expected release by the end of this year.

The possibility of an additional health education credential for more advanced levels of practice is being explored. As always, activities discussed at the meeting were in line with NCHEC's strategic plan. We are in the process of adding a public member to the Board of Commissioners. In recent years it has become common practice to have a "public member" serve on boards, someone not directly related to the certification to represent the interest of the consumer of services.

As a result of the completion of the Competencies Update Project, there are many changes underway at NCHEC. Please continue to check the website and mailings for updates on pertinent information.

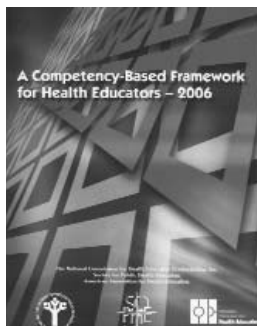

In closing, I would like to express my deepest gratitude to all Commissioners for their continued dedication and excellent spirit of service to NCHEC and the health education profession in general. Thanks for all you do, and I do appreciate your support.

Take care and have a pleasant summer.

ESSENTIAL REFERENCE - ORDER NOW!

The new publication, “A Competency-Based Framework for Health Educators - 2006,” presents a new hierarchical model for health education practice at the entry level and two advanced levels. Included are seven updated areas of responsibility as well as 35 competencies and 163 subcompetencies. The document also describes the historical development and evolution of a competency-based model for health education, summarizes the CUP research leading up to the latest model, and interprets the significance of changes in the new model. It is an essential reference for all health education students, faculty, practitioners, employers, policymakers, funding agencies, and any organization that provides workforce development and training for health educators. The document includes an assessment tool to measure the degree to which professional preparation curricula address respective subcompetencies, and a detailed comparison of the old and new responsibilities, competencies and subcompetencies. This publication is recommended for use in preparation for the revised CHES Exam effective October 2007.

It is available for purchase via the NCHEC website, www.nchec.org.

An Update from the Division Board for Certification of Health Education Specialists (DBCHES) Beverly Mahoney, Jacquie Rainey and Dixie Dennis

The DBCHES directors have had a very active 18 months. In June 2005, we received the results of the Competencies Update Project (CUP), and the new, hierarchical model that was developed to describe the scope of practice for the Health Education profession. During the summer of 2005, a DBCHES sub-committee reviewed and compared CUP areas of responsibility, competencies, and sub-competencies with existing ones. For a detailed listing, refer to Appendix B of “A Competency-Based Framework for Health Educators-2006.”

In August of 2005, board members met at NCHEC headquarters for the annual face-to-face meeting. During this time, we met with representatives from the Professional Examination Services to review the status of the certification process and to plan for the future. At this meeting we re-rubricated all of the existing test bank items according to the new framework.

As we moved into fall 2005, via our monthly telephone conference meetings, directors continued working on the new entry-level exam and preparing for the National Congress of Health Educators. During the national congress, which was held in Dallas, Texas, on February 23-25, 2006, DBCHES directors presented at three different sessions, sharing information about the new framework with those in attendance. Also, throughout the year, DBCHES directors have participated in discussions regarding the new framework at the annual meetings of AAHE, SOPHE, and ASHA.

During the summer and fall of 2006, DBCHES directors will again be concerned with testing issues. We will convene in Whitehall, PA once in July for our item-writing workshop to add additional items to the test bank that address the new areas of responsibility, competencies, and sub-competencies, and again in September for our test construction session. In the meantime, individual board directors are assessing the areas that will require the addition of new items.

We have been eliciting input from professionals via our various meetings regarding the possibility of an advanced credential. Issues for discussion focus on the central questions of:

- a) should the profession have an advanced credential,
- b) if so, what should be the eligibility requirements, and,
- c) what form (test, folio, or other measures) should the demonstration of achievement take?

At this point, we welcome input from all CHES and other interested professionals regarding your opinions and thoughts about this issue by completing the survey that will be available via the NCHEC website.

No CECH requirement exists for CHES in retired status. The annual renewal fee is $15.00."

Congratulations! Paula Williams-Valencia was the Highest Scorer on the April 2006 CHES Exam

Paula Williams-Valencia, CHES, earned the highest score on the April 2006 CHES Exam. She received her MPH in Community Health, Behavioral Science and Health Education from UCLA and her BS in Communication Arts-Public Relations/Marketing from California State Polytechnic University, Pomona. Paula is employed as a Health Educator at L.A. Care Health Plan, a not-for-profit health plan for Medicaid and Healthy Families, with more than 750,000 members.

When asked why she became certified, she replied, "I completed my MPH in Health Education more than 10 years ago, in 1994. I wanted to become certified as a health education specialist to enhance my credibility and qualifications as a professional. Personally, I wanted to prove to myself that I could do it!!"

Anna Torres Salemi

Certified Health Education Specialist stands for Excellence in Health Education An Interview with Anna Torres Salemi, CHES

Submitted by Brenda Marshall, DBPD Director

What makes a professional reach for personal best? How can excellence in education and professionalism be promoted? We think that some of our CHES have found the answers to these questions and are models of excellence in health education. The following interview is the first of a series of profiles on CHES whose love of lifelong learning, and desire to achieve their professional pinnacle, sets them apart as role models of achievement. Anna is completing her doctoral thesis at South Florida University on the topic of the Social Construction of School Refusal. She also works as the resident night manager at the American Cancer Society's Benjamin Medick Hope Lodge. Somehow, between researching and writing her dissertation, spending time with her husband, and meeting the requirements of her job, Anna has made time to earn far more than the required 75 CHES CECH needed for her recertification.

It was no easy task catching up with her for this interview, but it was well worth the perseverance. Anna was asked what she saw as the greatest benefit of her CHES status, and she said that it was all about reflecting a professional standard. "When people see CHES after your name, they understand that you know the required body of knowledge and that you are committed to professionalism."

I asked her about why she had many more CECH than the requirement, and she answered, "I don't even think about that. I'm a learner. I don't see the CECH as a requirement, but as a product of being a professional. Health education is not a stagnant field, and to stay at the top of your game, you make that commitment. I'm passionate about what I do, and taking these courses ... well, it's like my heartbeat or breathing ... it's a critical function."

It is for these reasons we want to salute you, Anna, for your passion, commitment and excellent role modeling. We take this opportunity to wish Anna congratulations on the great achievement of pursuing her doctorate, which she sees as only another step in her quest for professional excellence.
