This year’s Fall Homecoming was a family affair for Sam Winston, OD ’11, as he returned to his alma mater with wife, Lea, and their two children, Noah and Lydia. The children’s great-grandfather was the late Harold Winston, OD ’41, who would no doubt be proud that nearly 75 years after his graduation, the Winston family remains connected to SCO. The junior Dr. Winston joined his father, Barry Winston, OD ’74, and uncle, Jerry Winston, OD ’67, both in practice and in supporting a family scholarship to encourage new generations to pursue optometry.

connection

Dr. Winston and other alumni encourage you to stay connected with your alma mater. Your support enables scholarship opportunities and outstanding clinical training that makes SCO’s graduates leaders in our profession.

FROM THE PRESIDENT

Each fall, excitement builds on campus as our faculty and staff prepare for a new academic year. We cannot help but be reinvigorated as we see the optimism and enthusiasm in our new students as they begin the four-year journey that will ultimately transform them from entering students into top caliber optometric physicians.

This fall’s entering class set records for average GPA and OAT scores and for the number of individuals admitted. In fact, our students were in the top six in the country in both GPA and OAT scores...only two other colleges of optometry can boast that. Our students gained acceptance by demonstrating the superior attributes and academic track record that SCO expects of our students. They demonstrated to faculty members in the interview process that they know what they are getting into, and are anxious to begin.

Our newest students join an institution dedicated to achieving outstanding performance and continuous process improvement. In recent years, SCO has enjoyed a reputation for training top clinicians. This year, we saw more opportunities than ever before for our interns to use what they’ve learned through an increasing number of community outreach events, as well as a record number of patients seen through The Eye Center. These programs provide our interns with greater patient encounters, and at the same time, demonstrate to the local community that SCO is dedicated to using our expertise to make life better for our neighbors. Besides setting records for patient fees, we set a record for the provision of uncompensated services ($1.4 M).

Building on this kind of positive momentum has been a primary objective for SCO’s Strategic Planning Committee. Including four members of our Board of Trustees, the committee met in November to identify goals that will guide our institution over the next five years. The full Board of Trustees will take up the committee’s work at its January meeting, and we will share our vision for the future with alumni and friends in the 2015-2016 academic year.

Guiding all we do is a student-centered mission. As primary stakeholders in what we accomplish, our students have already benefited from the first full year’s use of our new academic facilities. But we are not done yet. We’re looking at other improvements that will solidify SCO’s strengths in the increasingly competitive landscape for optometric education.

We’re heartened by increased engagement with our alumni, including a noticeable amount of participation by recent graduates at this year’s Fall Homecoming Weekend. We’ve made great strides in improving the relationship between our alumni and the institution. Your ideas and feedback are appreciated, and we use your input to help measure your enthusiasm for what we endeavor to accomplish.

Your financial support is especially vital to sustaining the upward trajectory we’ve achieved in recent years. Your gifts enable us to recruit top students and provide rigorous academic/clinical training programs that will benefit optometry when these students join the profession as top-trained optometric physicians. These are your future partners...the providers of care for the patients you have seen throughout your entire professional careers.

Our determination to continue the quest toward recognition as the undisputed best college of optometry may seem like a lofty goal, but no institution ever achieved greatness by settling for the status quo. Success requires investing the time, energy and vision to achieve the high standards we’ve strategically embraced. We hope that you are proud of the institutional dreams that you have helped make a reality. You will always be a part of us...and we will always be a part of you.

Thank you for supporting our mission throughout 2014 and into the New Year.

Richard W. Phillips, OD ’78, FAAO
SCO Acquires New Mobile Unit

Local Foundation Supports SCO’s Progress

SCO’s progress outlined in this Annual Report edition has seen considerable local support from The Plough Foundation in Memphis. In addition to supporting the campaign that helped construct SCO’s new academic facility, Plough’s support also helped the college launch a new community-based program to provide eye care to seniors at community centers or places of worship.

Thanks to Plough’s support, SCO will reach the public even more through a newly acquired mobile eye exam unit from S.A.V.E. (School Advocates for Vision and Education). The nonprofit organization was founded by Henry Lindeman and his wife, Amy, in 2008 to increase access of services for children who often failed to follow up for needed care detected by in-school vision screenings.

Prior to October’s acquisition, the unit was funded by support from The Plough Foundation, with SCO providing doctor coverage through a collaboration with S.A.V.E. Under the transfer agreement, SCO will operate the unit and rebrand it as the clinical program’s “MobiEyes” program.

“S.A.V.E.’s mission has always been to provide access to eye health and vision care services for schoolchildren in Shelby County,” said Christine Weinreich, director of corporate and foundation relations at SCO. “SCO has enjoyed a working relationship with S.A.V.E. since its inception, and our dynamic, expanding community outreach programs have enabled us to absorb the operation and expand its potential.”

The mobile unit, a customized recreational vehicle with two exam rooms and a children’s optical dispensary, has provided on-site vision care in conjunction with the clinical programs of SCO at Shelby County schools since 2009. SCO plans to continue the work of S.A.V.E. and further increase the number of Shelby County residents benefiting from the mobile unit by expanding its reach to additional schools, public health fairs, senior and other programs.

For the next several months, SCO will send doctors out into the community with the unit three days per week to provide eye health and vision care to residents who need it most. SCO anticipates increasing the mobile care unit’s use to five days per week in 2015.

“The transition, one supported by The Plough Foundation, will continue these much needed services to area children and to the additional people who will be served by the increased capacity brought on by SCO’s amplified involvement,” said James E. Venable, OD ’89, SCO’s Vice President for Clinical Programs.

SCO is additionally grateful to The Plough Foundation for its support of other notable initiatives throughout 2014, including the new Community-Based Care for Aging Memphians program. Plough’s support marks the college’s second largest patient care grant ever, and the largest grant for community-based care.

The program launched in the fall and will continue next year as it provides comprehensive exams, glasses and disease care to approximately 600 patients aged 60 and older in varied community settings such as churches and senior centers in exchange for their participation in surveys and exam data collection. The data will be used to assess best practices to assist patients where the need is greatest.
The most recent fiscal year coincided with the first full academic year’s use of SCO’s recently constructed academic expansion. At year’s end, SCO’s leadership team was working with Board of Trustees members to develop the college’s next five-year strategic plan to guide the institution through the year 2020.
As you’ll see in this Annual Report section, the college has been energized by the forward momentum that led to our new campus improvements. SCO saw significant increases in the clinical training opportunities brought about by an expanded outreach presence.

Coupled with an emphasis on service learning, our students are engaged and more aware of the impact that optometry can make in our communities. Your involvement with SCO plays an important part as we carry out our mission. Your support and enthusiasm strengthen SCO’s commitment to our pursuit of excellence.
Optometric Education

Educating the best possible healthcare providers is one of the primary components of SCO’s mission. SCO’s students excel at all levels, from board scores to loan repayment ability.

- SCO completed its first academic year of use of the college’s new academic facility, including classrooms, pre-clinical labs, study areas and a new research suite of offices.
- From 787 applicants, SCO enrolled 136 students in the Class of 2018 with a record high average GPA of 3.56 and an outstanding average OAT score of 328. Both averages were in the top six in the country, with only two other colleges of optometry having both averages in the top 6.
- SCO’s enrollment is the highest in 32 years at 527; only two students left last year, at a 0.4% attrition rate.
- The Class of 2015 surpassed the 78% national average by achieving an 86+% passage rate on the Applied Basic Science portion of the NBEO sequence; the Class of 2014 had a passage rate of 100% on Part II, the Patient Assessment and Management portion.
- The Hayes Center sponsored a number of programs for students, including Focus on the Future, in which first-year students hear ODs address various modes of practice, in addition to providing practice management resources to aid students in their transition to practice.
- The Class of 2014 continued the trend of decreasing the average indebtedness of students at graduation, with three of the last four years showing decreases in the amount of indebtedness incurred.
- The Summer Student Research Fellowship saw 31 students participate in several research projects.

AOA President David Cockrell, OD ’81, and his wife, Cherry Cockrell, are among those who have actively supported SCO’s campaign to improve the college’s academic facilities. Dr. Cockrell recently toured our new facilities when he visited to speak to a campus-wide assembly in SCO’s new classrooms.
Lifelong Learning

SCO encourages lifelong learning, principles that our students will carry into their practice and careers. From special programs to incorporating new technology, SCO promotes meaningful opportunities designed to help our graduates succeed.

- SCO opened a new satellite clinic on the University of Memphis campus to provide interns with exposure to younger and different subsets of patient encounters.

- Providing interns with a model for success, The Eye Center has seen a total growth rate of 35% in billable patient encounters over the past seven years.

- SCO’s research funding doubled thanks to significant grants from Allergan and Alcon.

- The Hayes Center worked with externship preceptors to encourage better extern understanding of practice management modules, particularly at private practice externship sites.

- A $15,000 grant from the Hayes Family Foundation launched the first Hayes Center Practice of Excellence Award.

- The inaugural Resident’s Weekend was held in June with all residents delivering COPE-approved presentations.

- New CE programs included a revitalized online CE program, a destination CE event in New Orleans and a program focused on new technologies in the management of ocular surface disease.

- SCO’s Information Services department has assisted in creating a smartphone app for the Externship program to enable students to select their ideal extern rotations and to record patient encounters and other reporting capabilities.

Dr. Zakiya Nicks, SCO’s Community Outreach Coordinator, presented copies of “Arthur’s Eyes” and “The Big Book of Family Eye Care” to Diane Jalfon, Executive Director of the Memphis Library Foundation, in appreciation of the library supporting SCO’s new “See to Read” program.

SCO's commitment to service continues to expand. The college’s outreach programs grew significantly over the last year, benefiting patients and student education alike, yet also providing our faculty and staff the opportunity to participate and witness firsthand the positive impact made by serving others.

- Over 50 events were coordinated by the Community Outreach Program.
- SCO is providing full eye exams and follow-up services to nearly 1,800 children at the Achievement School District schools in the Frayser neighborhood of Memphis. It’s Tennessee’s first in-school program to provide every child in a specific school system with access to eye care, regardless of income or insurance status.
- A 2014 Healthy Eyes Healthy People grant funded a new “See to Read Vision Awareness” program held at two Memphis Library branches.
- Notable community partners included Community Alliance for the Homeless, Convoy of Hope and Friends for Life, with additional outreach efforts held at Memphis Grizzlies games.
- Jigna Patel, ’15, received one of five awards for students in higher education in Tennessee provided by the Harold Love Outstanding Community Service Fund.
- SCO’s recognition included President Phillips being named to Memphis Magazine’s list of the top 100 most influential leaders, the Commercial Appeal naming SCO one of the top workplaces in Memphis, the Memphis Business Journal naming SCO’s new academic facility as a finalist for its “Top Building Awards,” and numerous faculty award recognitions.
- Three Saturday Service Experience events provided students and other volunteers with the opportunity to work with providing eyecare to patients from the Synergy Treatment Centers.

The Foundations of Service Learning course (CLN 203) was taught in workshop format designed to prepare students for the School Screening program and to introduce service-learning methodology.

A significant effort is being made to stress the importance of advocacy, with faculty advisors assigned to 38 states (and Canada) as part of the faculty state club advising program.

Southern College of Optometry honored the academic and professional achievements of students, alumni and faculty at its 29th annual all school Convocation ceremony held in October. First-year students received their white coats, signed SCO’s honor code and took the Optometric Oath as they were formally welcomed into the profession.

Receiving SCO’s Lifetime Achievement Award – the college’s highest honor – was former AOA President Joe Ellis, OD ’86, pictured with this year’s Young Alumni Award recipient, SCO faculty member Lindsay Elkins, OD ’07, and SCO Board Chair Jarrett Johnson, OD ’90.

John Mark Jackson, OD ’99, received the Burnett Faculty Recognition Award. Faculty of the Year Awards were presented to Alan Kabat, OD (two awards), William Kress, OD (two awards), John Mark Jackson, OD ’99, Carrie Lebowitz, OD ’06, Gerald Eisenstadt, OD ’84, and Lindsay Elkins, OD ’07.

Members of the Class of 1964 reunited and received recognition on the occasion of their 50-year anniversary with certificates noting their special milestone of service to the profession. A large group of alumni from the Class of 1959 also attended.

Scholarships and other awards were presented in recognition of academic excellence, leadership and service. SCO’s scholarships are made possible by the generous support of the college’s Annual Campaign and Endowed Scholarship funds.

SCO alumni gathered for a lively Homecoming and Fall CE celebration this year, with the Class of 1984 having the most in attendance. Alumni began the festivities with a Thursday night kick-off party, followed by a BBQ luncheon and reception on Friday, and culminating with Saturday night’s alumni dinner and after-party at the Peabody Memphis. Attendees also participated in CE on campus and at the Peabody. Photos from all the events are available on SCO’s website. Next year’s event is scheduled for September 24-27, so mark your calendars!

Service Through Leadership

In addition to serving as Chair of SCO’s Department of Optometric Education, Bart Campbell, OD '87, has made important contributions to the profession of optometry as a member of the Accreditation Council on Optometric Education (ACOE). He was appointed as ACOE Chair in 2011 and subsequently reappointed each year since then. In this Q&A interview, Dr. Campbell provides insight into his ACOE service dating back to the 1990s and the ACOE’s work to support high standards that benefit the profession of optometry.
Q: How long have you been a member of the ACOE?
A: I was initially appointed as a member of ACOE in July 2009. Appointment as a member of ACOE is actually separate from being appointed as chair. Member appointments are for three-year terms, with a maximum limit of three terms. I was reappointed for a second term as a member in July 2012.

Q: How did you first become involved with ACOE?
A: My involvement with ACOE began in the 1990s. My first role with ACOE was as an accreditation site visitor — termed a “consultant” by ACOE — on evaluation site visits to residency programs. Apparently someone thought that I did a good job, because I got asked to go on many subsequent site visits, and eventually I was named as a “senior residency consultant,” meaning that I led the site visits.

Q: For ODs who may not be as familiar with the ACOE, how would you define the purpose and value that ACOE provides to optometry?
A: ACOE’s official mission statement is “The ACOE serves the public by establishing, maintaining and applying standards to ensure the academic quality and continuous improvement of optometric education that reflects the contemporary practice of optometry. The scope of the ACOE encompasses professional optometric degree programs, optometric residency programs, and optometric technician programs.”

ACOE is recognized by the U.S. Department of Education (USDE) and the Council for Higher Education Accreditation (CHEA) as an accreditor of Doctor of Optometry degree programs, optometric residency programs, and optometric technician programs. In a nutshell, ACOE ensures that all programs that it accredits meet a certain level of quality. This provides assurance to the public (potential students and their families) and the profession that a graduate of these programs has completed an educational program that has undergone rigorous external review by an impartial third party whose policies and procedures have been reviewed by USDE and CHEA.

The Accreditation Council on Optometric Education has eleven members. Eight are optometrists, two are non-optometrist “public” members and one member is an optometric technician. Of the eight members who are optometrists, three are practitioners nominated by the American Optometric Association, two are practitioners with experience serving on state boards nominated by the Association of Regulatory Boards of Optometry, and three are optometric educators nominated by the Association of Schools and Colleges of Optometry.

Q: What are the most notable changes or differences in the work that the ACOE has been doing since your involvement?
A: The adoption of the accreditation standards designed for the evaluation of potential new O.D. degree programs is, by far, the most notable change of difference.

Q: How would you describe the standards currently applied by ACOE?
A: The accreditation standards for each of the three types of programs that we accredit are very comprehensive in nature and are, themselves, continuously evaluated through ACOE’s Quality Assurance Committee. Programs must continuously demonstrate that they meet the standards. In addition to regularly scheduled site visits, all accredited programs must prepare annual reports that are evaluated by the Council. Site visits may be scheduled at shorter than normal intervals if the Council determines that a program is not or may not be meeting the standards.

Q: How do you feel that serving on the ACOE contributes as service back to the profession, namely, the direct impact on optometry that ACOE involvement brings?
A: The direct impact on optometry is, in many ways, very similar to the impact that a faculty member contributes. That is, the real impact comes from the new professionals who each year complete the educational programs accredited by ACOE. The Council plays a very real role in ensuring that those programs provide an education that enables those new professionals to have careers during which they not only contribute strength to the profession but also outstanding care to the public.

Q: When your service to the ACOE ends, what will your take away be, meaning, how will your service have contributed to your professional growth or impacted you on a more personal level?
A: Obviously, I have gained a very thorough knowledge of the process of accreditation itself, including how organizations like ACOE interact with the agencies that oversee them, such as the USDE. I have a much greater understanding of and appreciation for working with the volunteers that enable ACOE to achieve its mission.

The amount of personal time devoted by my fellow Council members and the many additional volunteers who participate in accreditation site visits each year is staggering. Working with all of these volunteers, providing leadership in a way that acknowledges their sacrifice while ensuring that the Council accomplishes its mission, has been an exciting challenge and a source of personal and professional growth for me.

Q: What have been the biggest challenges faced by the ACOE?
A: Certainly a big challenge is coping with the significant increase in the number of programs accredited by ACOE. While new O.D. degree programs attract all the attention, the increase in the number of optometric residency programs nationwide has been much more significant in terms of increased workload for the ACOE and its staff.

All members of the Council are volunteers, and the work consumes significant amounts of personal time. Our meetings are typically three to four days in length, but preparation for the meetings involves a great deal of reading and analysis beforehand. In addition, Council members also serve on site visits to programs, which require a significant amount of preparation, report writing, and time away from home. Accomplishing our mission while not overtaxing our very dedicated volunteer members is a continuing challenge.

Q: What have been the biggest achievements that you would cite for the ACOE in recent years?
A: ACOE has recently developed and adopted a set of accreditation standards for the evaluation of new optometric degree programs. Prior to the adoption of these standards, the Council had adapted its standards used for the evaluation of existing programs for use when evaluating potential new programs. Shortly after I became chair, I became convinced that we could improve upon this process. After more than a year of development, including review of comments from various segments of the profession, the new standards were adopted and went into effect at the beginning of 2014.

Q: How long have you been familiar with the ACOE, how would you define the purpose and value that ACOE provides to the profession?
A: For ODs who may not be as familiar with the ACOE, how would you define the purpose and value that ACOE provides to optometry?
1947  Jack Runninger, OD, recently recommended SCO’s new TearWell Advanced Dry Eye Treatment Center to a friend, Edgar Watson, who moved from Kentucky to Louisiana. Dr. Runninger writes that Mr. Watson returned to Georgia praising TearWell’s service: “The amount of time spent with him, the caring attitude, and the treatment were all first class.”

1950  C. Wayne Shearer, OD, celebrated his 90th birthday on August 13. He retired from his practice in Chattanooga, TN in 1997.

1951  Cliff Rainey, OD, was selected as the Grand Marshall in the LaGrange, GA Christmas Parade. Dr. Rainey has practiced in LaGrange for more than 60 years.

1954  Gordon Butterfield, OD, is enjoying retirement and has moved from Kentucky to Louisiana. Rene Pigeon, OD, is celebrating 60 years of practicing optometry in Louisiana. In addition to his Army medical service, Dr. Pigeon’s other service involvement includes being a past president of his state association and serving as a Louisiana Superdome Commissioner. He and his wife have been married 55 years and have three children.

1963  Tom Wilkinson, OD, reports that he recently retired after more than a half century of practice as an Army OD, in private and corporate practice and in a medical clinic. He volunteers at a state mental facility and is a grant seeker for a non-profit organization. He writes that he looks forward to spending time his with hamster, Lloyd.

1965  Leon Fuller, OD, recently retired after nearly a half century of practice in Florida. James Sandefur, OD, SCO Board member and Executive Director of the Optometry Association of Louisiana, became the inaugural recipient of the James D. Sandefur EyeCon Advocacy Award presented at the Texas Optometric Association’s EyeCon meeting. The award will be given annually for legislative advocacy efforts to ODS from Southwest Council states.

1968  President Emeritus Billy Cochran, OD ’68, was joined by his sons, daughter-in-law and granddaughter in competing at this year’s SVOSH EyeSK.

1969  W. Earl Malone, OD, was honored in November as a 2014 Everyday Hero by Interfaith Partnerships in Gulfport, MS.

1972  Jerry Rogers, OD, pictured, was named OD of the Year at the annual fall meeting of the Tennessee Association of Optometry Physicians.

1974  Martha Rosemore Morrow, OD, has been elected President of the Alabama State Board of Optometry.

1978  Lloyd Tantum, OD, and his son, Will Tantum, OD ’14, recently broke ground on a new, larger facility in Maryville, TN. Blount County Eye Center will expand from 2,500 to 9,000 square feet with nine exam rooms, seven tech rooms, two pre-exam rooms and a drive-through window for patients to pick up eyewear, in addition to doubling its current staff.

1980  Ty Sloan, OD, was among the alumni who joined a “Focus on the Future” panel hosted by the Hayes Center for Practice Excellence for SCO’s first-year students in September. The panel shared advice for students to prepare them for post-graduate success and also included moderator Glenn Goldring, OD ’78, Chris Cooper, OD ’97, Mike Gerstner, OD ’97, Whitney Hauser, OD ’01, Do Nguyen, OD ’12, and Tina Grosshans, OD ’14.

1981  David Cockreel, OD, AOA President, recently testified before Congress about the role ODs play in ensuring the health and safety of contact lens patients.

Jeff Foster, OD, was named OD of the Decade by the Tennessee Association of Optometric Physicians at the TAOP’s annual fall meeting.

1986  David Shannon, OD, past chair of the Association of Optometrists in the UK, and SECO President Jim Herman, OD ’86, recently visited with SCO President Richard W. Phillips, OD ’78, during SECO’s 2014 Education Destination held in partnership with the AOP’s annual meeting in London.

Scott Andreas, SCO’s former Dean of Students, passed away in August. He retired in 2002 after devoting 35 years to the college and later endowed a student scholarship. A retired Lt. Commander of the U.S. Navy, he was an avid cyclist and musician. Survivors include his wife, son, daughter and five grandchildren.

Robert Ebbes, OD
Professor Emeritus and longtime SCO faculty, passed away in October. A graduate of ICO, he retired as a Major from the U.S. Air Force before joining SCO’s faculty. Survivors include his wife of 62 years, their five children, seven grandchildren, and seven great-grandchildren.
1987  Lori Blackmer, OD, was named OD of the Year by the Mississippi Optometric Association.

Fred Farias III, OD, is serving as President of the Texas Optometric Association through February 2015.

Francis L. Pinard, OD, recently completed his two-year term as president of the Vermont Optometric Association. Under his leadership, Vermont passed legislation to guarantee pay parity between ODs and ophthalmologists, decoupled vision plans from medical insurances, and eliminated the mandatory discount offered by vision plans. Dr. Pinard has two practice locations, and his son, Sean, is currently a second-year student at SCO.

1995  Elizabeth Howard, OD, and Andrew Howard, OD '96, recently launched a new practice in LaFollette, TN.

1996  A.B. Naylor II, OD, was recently named by Phillips Community College of the University of Arkansas (PCCUA) as this year’s recipient of the Distinguished Alumnus Award.

2001  Cynthia Corbin, OD, has been appointed to the Knox County Health Department Board in Barbourville, Kentucky as the only OD among other health care providers to serve on the board. Dr. Corbin owns a private practice and has three daughters with her husband, Donnie.

2006  Jason “Bo” Beddingfield, OD, and Christopher Bullin, OD ’07, tied for Young OD of the Year award at the fall meeting of the Mississippi Optometric Association.

Marc Carozza, OD, lost his Arkadelphia, Arkansas practice to a fire in September. Our thoughts go out to him and his staff as they work to rebuild.

Emily Whitman, OD, and her husband, Chris, welcomed a daughter, Bethany, pictured, on June 17, 2014. She joins older siblings Neil (4), Lily (3), and Joanna (2).

2007  Ryan Halpern, OD, was recently interviewed for a Vision Monday story about practice management. He also recently stopped by SCO during a recent Memphis visit to tour the new academic facility.

2008  Rachel Aughney-Clawson, OD, has joined the practice of 2020 EyeCare in the Aspen, CO area.

Janet Monaco, OD, recently opened her private practice, Bella Vision, in Spartanburg, SC.

2009  Ashley Schuelke Redvell, OD, and Jonathan Redvell, OD ’11, welcomed twins, Jolie Brooks and Parker Grace on November 4.

Christina Vranich, OD, was named Young OD of the Year at the annual fall meeting of the Tennessee Association of Optometric Physicians.

Christina (Heptig) Windhorst, OD, married Aaron Windhorst on June 22. They reside in Manhattan, KS.

2010  Jonathan Goodwin, OD, married Ashley Sites, on July 12 in Stuttgart, AR.

Ross Lumpkin, OD, was installed as President of the Tennessee Association of Optometric Physicians annual fall meeting. Jessica Ellis Durham, OD ’10, was installed as Secretary/Treasurer, and Tonya Reynolds, OD ’01, as Board Chair.

Dustin Vance, OD, recently opened Vance Vision Clinic and received an award for patient care excellence.

2011  Eric Combs, OD, and Alicia (Back) Combs, OD ’11, recently started their own private practice in Liberty Township, OH. In addition to Combs Family EyeCare, the couple also recently bought an existing private practice in Middletown, OH to serve as their second location.

Jacob Hodges, OD, and Ginnie Hodges, OD ’11, welcomed their first child, Oliver Mark, on November 12.

Matt Willis, OD, and his wife, Rosemary, welcomed a daughter, Lydia Rose, born August 2.

2012  Kacy Barker, OD, and her husband, Matthew, welcomed a son, Ethan Matthew, on July 11.

Meredith McCormick Rhodes, OD, and her husband, Mark, welcomed a son, William Emmitt, born September 28.

2013  Noushin Ahmed, OD, has joined Baltimore Washington Eye Center.

Ashley Gentrup, OD, recently joined Vision Eye Care and Vision Therapy Center in Sioux Falls, SD.

Travis Thompson, OD, has purchased Hardin Valley Eyecare and Optical in East Tennessee.

2014  Matt MacDonald, OD, recently joined Holtton King, OD ’85, at King Vision in Cornelia, GA.

Christopher Prough, OD, has joined Atascosa Vision Source in Pleasanton, TX.

Lekha Samuel, OD, joined Dr. Jason Singh, Executive Director of OneSight Foundation, in sharing their experiences providing eyecare in Gambia with SCO’s faculty, staff, residents and students at a recent campus-wide assembly.

Sarah Thompson, OD, recently joined Tarboro Eye Associates in North Carolina.
Marie Bodack, OD, was recently interviewed by Memphis Parent Magazine about pediatric vision and the InfantSEE program.

Chris Borgman, OD, authored an article about coding and billing in the August issue of Primary Care Optometry News, an article on neovascular glaucoma in the August issue of Review of Optometry, as well as articles in Optometry Times and Optometry & Vision Science.

Freddy Chang, OD, PhD, and John Sharpe, OD ’83, presented COPE-approved CE at the Southern Indiana Pharmacology Seminar in November.

Kelley Dasinger, OD, has earned Diplomate status in the American Board of Optometry.

Janette Dumas, OD, led an NBEO review seminar and participated in a networking panel for students at the National Optometric Conference in Washington D.C.

Cynthia Heard, OD, delivered two CE lectures at the conference, where Brittany Tounsel, ’15, was inaugurated as national NOSA president and Kirsten McKnight, ’16, was elected 2015-16 president. Feyi Aworunse, ’16, and Gerald Stinson, ’16, received scholarships and joined other students and faculty members in meeting with members of the Congressional Black Caucus on Capitol Hill to discuss health care issues in underrepresented and diverse minority communities.

Scott Ensor, OD ’01, has been appointed to lead SCO’s newly created Department of Interprofessional Education (IPE). Dr. Ensor will be leading a collaborative effort to guide and develop the classroom, laboratory and clinical infrastructure necessary for students to graduate with an understanding and appreciation for the role of optometric physicians in interdisciplinary healthcare.

Paul Harris, OD, was interviewed in a recent Vision Monday story about the Chart 2020 Duo app. He and Marc Taub, OD, have started a new semi-monthly column in Review of Optometry focusing on refractive care, highlighting cases they’ve seen and answering questions from doctors around the world.

Whitney Hauser, OD ’01, and Alan Kabat, OD, have been active in promoting the new TearWell Advanced Dry Eye Treatment Center, including a feature story in the Commercial Appeal. Both were interviewed for a story in September’s Review of Optometry. Dr. Hauser was interviewed by Optometry Times and wrote an article about dry eye relief for the At Home Memphis magazine.

John Mark Jackson, OD ’99, MS, co-authored an article about tear film power in the August issue of Contact Lens Spectrum and another on GP lens parameter changes in the October issue.

Alan Kabat, OD, co-authored “Treatment or Disease?” in September’s Review of Optometry, and “Creating Wellness on the Ocular Surface” in October’s Optometric Management.

Taylor Kiser, OD ’12, Alan Kabat, OD, and Patricia Cisarik, OD PhD, were recently selected by their fellow faculty peers to serve as faculty liaisons to the TAOP, SECO and AOA, respectively.

Wil McGriff, OD, MPH, and Zakiya Nicks, OD, hosted a “Diabetes and Healthy Eyes” program in October as they trained community health promoters on the impact of diabetes.

Pam Schnell, OD ’01, and Marc Taub, OD, MS, were invited to edit the World Council of Optometry’s annual publication, World Focus, which launched on World Sight Day and was distributed at the American Academy of Optometry meeting in Denver. They also are co-editing Optometry & Visual Performance.

Glen Steele, OD ’69, received the Skefington-Alexander Award at the recent International Congress of Behavioral Optometry (ICBO) in the UK. Dr. Steele also was recently interviewed about the importance of pediatric eye exams for a story in the Chicago Tribune.

Marc Taub, OD, MS, and Paul Harris, OD, co-authored “A comparison of two tests of visual-motor integration” in the July journal issue of Optometry & Visual Performance. Dr. Taub was also interviewed by Optometry Times for a recent story about vision therapy. Dr. Taub received the Armand Bastian Award at the recent ICBO meeting in the UK, where he served as poster organizer and Dr. Harris as program coordinator.

James Venable, OD ’89, and Aaron Kerr, OD ’98, were each named finalists in the Memphis Business Journal’s Healthcare Heroes Awards. Dr. Venable for leading innovation through technology in The Eye Center, and Dr. Kerr for overseeing SCO’s growing Community Outreach program. Dr. Venable also recently represented SCO as a panelist at a state-of-the-industry health care seminar in Memphis.
